Where it comes to discovery and communications governance, financial services firms are facing increasing pressure from regulators and customers to embrace innovation and prepare for a data-driven future.

The Drive for Innovation is Fuelled By

1. The need for a holistic, cross-functional view of data for risk and compliance, regulatory, audit, and litigation.
2. The ability to support self-service applications to reduce support for regulatory and IT staff.
3. The desire to connect with the expanding range of platforms and channels to meet customer expectations.

The Challenges Fueling Innovation in Communications Governance

- The amount of time firms expect to spend liaising with regulators and exchanges over the next 12 months.
- The amount of time firms expect to spend on e-discovery search time.
- The percentage of firms that expect to spend more time with regulators and exchanges than last year.

The Opportunities of a Data Democracy

- The democratization of data science, empowering business innovation.
- The ability to support self-service applications.
- The ability to access data quickly and easily.

Embrace innovative solutions to stay ahead of ever changing requirements.
